ELMER H. EPPERSON

The hardy men and women of pure-bred American stock, who crossed the Allegheny and Blue Ridge mountains after the War of 1812 to settle Iowa, one of Uncle Sam's richest investments, were ancestors of our Broker of the week, Elmer H. Epperson.

Mr. Epperson was born and went to school in a little farming town named Afton in southern Iowa, and for six years or so he helped his folks work the farm. But with a commercial college sheepskin and a university diploma in his "Unfinished Business" file, he succumbed to a desire to try his wings in business.

The first business experience was with the National Cash Register Company where Elmer grew with them for fourteen years, later transferring to General Motors in the capacity of distributor for their Frigidaire Division. Wonder if he was involved in some of those old jokes about selling refrigerators to Eskimos? They weren't so funny, because now the report is that it is being done every day. It seems that home freezers and refrigerators are in big demand in the Arctic where they are used to "warm" food to proper temperatures for storage in 60-below winter weather! Anyway, Elmer helped establish a thriving business, wherever he sold them.

Elmer moved his family to Los Angeles in 1930 and became most interested in the future development of this part of the country—so interested that he engaged in helping this development by selling parcels of real estate. It wasn't until some sixteen years later that the family tired of the big
